Umunhum Conservancy

Many have run dogs or just visited the mountain and know what a great place it is. There is a group called the Umunhum Conservancy (a 501 c 3, non profit) that is raising money to pay to restore the block building at the top. It is on Mid Penninsula Open Space property and they would prefer it gone. It is one of the few things of the "COLD WAR" that is left in our area and it was there to protect us.

Here is the website.

Gabe is a tall, handsome, long haired Siberian with gorgeous brown eyes. Gabe is loving, affectionate, and loves to crawl up to give you hugs and kisses. His coat is beautiful and long, but with very little shedding. His tail is beautifully plumed and carried over his back. His long coat makes him look bigger than he really is and weighs only 48 pounds. Gabe is very Siberian in behavior. Gabe knows sit, shake, come, and down. Of course, there is a what is in it for me attitude. Obedience training will be helpful and will help him gain self-confidence in different environments and situations. He is overall an easy Siberian for experienced Siberian Families. Gabe is very social and needs to be around people. He gets along well with my older female Siberian and never gets tired of playing with her, and he gets along well with large and small dogs that we meet on our walks. He loves the outdoors or just hanging out with family and looks forward to his morning walks. He rides well in a car and has been to Lake Tahoe on multiple occasions. He also sleeps well in a crate. He meets each new day with renewed exuberance and curiosity. Although names can be changed, Gabe is named after a Military Working Dog (MWD) who fought in Iraq.

Glacier striking 1 year old (approximately) white male husky. Glacier is a calm young dog with a sweet disposition and walks like a little gentleman at your side on leash. Although on the shy side, he's actually very affectionate towards people once he's comfortable with the given situation. That's when he likes to curl up by your feet, or have a "chat" with "woo woos" ... yep, he's a talker. In the short time since he's been in our home he has quickly settled in, and his true personality is starting to shine. He's been great with my 2 female huskies, giving my old (13+ yrs) female space and respect while not challenging nor pestering my young female (~5 yrs). He doesn't appear to exhibit separation anxiety and is crate trained. In fact he loves his crate! He can't wait to run into his "room" when its time for bed. Glacier needs a quiet home with owners that who can accept his shyness and not spoil him until he warms up on his own. He may not adjust as quickly in your home as he has in ours. With time, training and understanding Glacier's shyness could go away ... but then again it may not. Though he might never become a social butterfly, Glacier will always be a sweet and loving dog who just want to be with people.

Freya is 5 months old and is an owner surrender. After purchasing her from a breeder, other aspects of her life changed dramatically and she realized that she could not care for her the way she felt she should. She is a cute little female siberian who is learning to play with other dogs (mine) She is up to date on all shots, is housetrained (80% is what i would assume in a new home til you each figure out the signals) knows basic commands and is crate trained.
